How to Get Winning Media on Disability Issues

Jennifer Laszlo Mizrahi
President of RespectAbility
July 2015
Speaker: Jennifer Laszlo Mizrahi is President of RespectAbilty, a non-profit organization working to empower people with disabilities to achieve the American Dream. She works regularly with national, state, and local policy leaders, workforce development professionals, media and employers, as well as with disability and faith-based organizations in order to expand opportunities for people with disabilities. She has met with teams from all 50 states, including 40 governors, on WIOA implementation. She has published more than 55 op-eds on disability issues, including in USA Today, Huffington Post, The Hill and other publications. Dyslexic herself, she also knows what it means to parent a child with multiple disabilities.
Why Media?

• To improve the lives of people with disabilities and all who want a welcoming, just and respectful world
• An opportunity to get your voice heard
• A chance to educate the public through facts and your personal experience
• An opportunity to change public opinion and improve legislation/policy/reality for people with disabilities and our communities
Post ADA: While women and minority groups have been able to enter the workforce, the employment gap between Americans with and without work limitations has expanded. (Civilians aged 16-64)

Trend line based on a “work limitation” measure of disability --- “Do you have a disability or health condition that limits the kind or amount of work you can do?”
Research conducted by the Disability Compendium shows a stark contrast between the percentage of people with and without disabilities who are outside of the workforce:

Disability Issues – Not Even Discussed

At the National Conventions, the Words They Used

A comparison of how often speakers at the two presidential nominating conventions used different words and phrases, based on an analysis of transcripts from the Federal News Service.

Democrats mentioned Alzheimer’s 0.0 times per 25,000 words

Republicans mentioned Alzheimer’s 0.4 times per 25,000 words

What are your media goals?

• Who specifically do you want to impact? Governor? Employers? People with Disabilities?
• What do THEY read/watch?
• Whose opinions do they trust?
• What facts will move their brains?
• What “human interest” story will win their hearts?
• Picture your reader/viewer when you write or do interviews!

Those Who Will Always Be Against You
Jackie Robinson Strategy

- First African American to play in Major League Baseball in the modern era, starting in 1947
- Brooklyn Dodgers ended racial segregation in MLB with the full support of the team
- When they hired Jackie Robinson, the Dodgers enjoyed more athletic success, sold more tickets, and gained a larger fan base: WIN-WIN-WIN

Jackie’s Athletic Awards:
- Selected for six consecutive All-Star Games, 1948-1954
- Won National League Most Valuable Player Award in 1949
- Inducted in Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962
Young People with Disabilities

• 1,200,000 Americans with disabilities between ages 16 and 20.\textsuperscript{1}
• Every year, 300,000 people will age into what should be the workforce.
• Whether they will achieve competitive integrated employment, or collect and depend on government benefits, depends largely on your decisions.
• High expectations, eliminating stigmas, and connecting them to effective programs and supports can enable positive outcomes.

What kind of media do you want?

- Op-ed = “Opposite the editorial page”
- News stories – Print, TV, radio

Both are:

- An opportunity to get your voice heard
- A chance to educate the public through facts and your personal experience
- An opportunity to change public opinion and improve legislation for people with disabilities
Your Most Important Tools:

• Your passionate opinion: People will listen when you speak from your heart
• A desire to share and educate: Help people understand why your issue is important
• The facts: Do your research and be accurate
Tips for Interviews & Op-eds

Number One Rule: Use the “KISS” Method
KISS = Keep It Simple & Straightforward

- Don’t use jargon and technical terms
- Use your personal experience to help others understand and care
- Use facts – and double-check for accuracy
- Use “people-first” language – terms that respect people with disabilities. You are in a unique position to shape the public image for people with disabilities
- Take advantage of “news hooks” – and you already have one!

July 26th is the 25th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act
• First paragraph: Concisely introduce your topic
• State your argument
• Give 3-6 facts that support your argument
• Don’t be afraid to use your personal experience
• Ensure each paragraph supports your argument
• Be your own critic: After each paragraph, ask yourself: “Why is this important? Why should others care?”
• Link your conclusion back to your original point
• How long? Typically 500-700 words but check the guidelines of your target population
Your Goal for Writing an Op-ed

Make people aware of the many benefits of employing people with disabilities

Strive to make these points:

• Most people with disabilities WANT to work: Nearly three-quarters of people with disabilities want jobs and independence more than benefits

• Hiring people with disabilities can make companies more profitable and saves taxpayers money
Some Facts You Can Use

• 56 million Americans – 1 out of 5 – live with disabilities

• 51 percent of likely voters say they, a family member, or a close friend has a disability

• 70 percent of working-age Americans with disabilities are not employed, leading to high levels of poverty, isolation, depression and financial dependency

• More Americans have a disability than are Hispanic, African American or Asian

• U.S. taxpayers spend more than $350 billion a year on benefits to people who, in most cases, would rather have a “hand-up” than a hand-out
Benefits for Companies of Hiring PwDs

Benefits of Hiring PwDs (competitive advantage)

Kalargyrou, 2014; Kalargyrou and Volis, 2014

• PwD's turnover rates are lower than people without disabilities (Grant, 1991)
• Increases psychological safety and productivity
• Improves innovation, problem solving abilities, ability to compete in all markets, react to expectations of diverse consumers
• Establishes positive company image and increasing customer satisfaction
• Positive effects on workforce
• Increases attendance of both people with and without disabilities (Grant, 1991)
• Improves corporate reputation (Grant, 1991)
• Walgreens as a case study: http://www.kter.org/conference/materials/docs/SafetyManagement.pdf
• 2010 Kessler-NOD Survey by Harris Interactive: http://www.nod.org/assets/downloads/01-2011_Exec_Summary.pdf
• Lowe’s example: http://nod.org/assets/downloads/NOD_Rutgers_Evaluation.pdf

Challenges

• Stereotyping/skepticism → New studies (Kuo and Kalargyrou 2014)
• Productivity issues when there is a mismatch between position and abilities
Examples You Can Use

- Walgreens, EY (formerly Ernst & Young), and AMC Theaters are examples of companies with successful disability inclusion programs.
- For a list of companies excelling at inclusive employment, see Disability Equality Index: http://www.usbln.org/programs-dei.html

Disability Issues Important in Early Primary States

IOWA
- 357,730 people with disabilities
- 169,300 of these are of working age
- 44.9% of people with disabilities are employed compared to 82.1% of people without disabilities

ONE IN FIVE Americans has a disability and the MAJORITY OF VOTERS have a loved one with a disability.

SOUTH CAROLINA
- 630,038 people with disabilities
- 340,300 of these are working age
- 30.7% of people with disabilities are employed compared to 72.7% of people without disabilities

NEVADA
- 357,835 people with disabilities
- 171,600 of these are of working age
- 39.2% of people with disabilities are employed compared to 73.1% of people without disabilities

NEW HAMPSHIRE
- 166,258 people with disabilities
- 77,900 of these are of working age
- 41.8% of people with disabilities are employed compared to 80.3% of people without disabilities

RespectAbilityUSA is nonpartisan and neither rates nor endorses candidates.
Do you, a family member, or a close friend have a disability?

Democrats: Yes - 52, No - 48
Independents: Yes - 58, No - 42
Republicans: Yes - 44, No - 56
Would you be more or less likely to vote for a Congressional candidate who is committed to making policies and programs to help those with disabilities a national priority, or would it make no difference to your vote?

- Much more likely: 41
- Much less likely: 2
- No difference: 55
And Finally...Pitching Your Story or Op-ed

- Decide where you want to get press/publish your op-ed. Consider regional/personal ties. It still counts if it’s not in The New York Times.

- Who do you know? If you have ties to an editorial board member, email your op-ed or press release directly to them.

- If possible, send by email with a short note to introduce yourself, your topic and its relevance (the news hook). Do coffee!

- Include your full name, telephone number and email. Publications often call/email to verify your identity.

- Paste – don’t attach – your op-ed or release into the email.
Where to send it?

• Check out guidelines for various publications & alternative publication venues: http://www.ccmc.org/node/16179
• Google your top media outlets and then do searches on their websites.
• See which reporters cover disability issues at that media outlet.
